A guide to finding an Electrician FAST when you need one most

So you need an Emergency Electrician?

But you search "Emergency Electrician" and a few pop up. You call them and no answer. Or you get an answer saying "sorry, nobody available".

Lots of time wasted. You still the emergency to deal with. And your worry levels have risen even more.

Also you might get someone who quotes an hourly rate. You now worry ... well how do I know how much this will cost? How long will it take? This could be expensive! Will they deliberately go slow?

If someone is charging an hourly rate what does that actually mean? It means they are not confident in their ability to fault find! If they knew they were good at it. They would know they can resolve faults fast. Therefore they would not need to charge by the hour.

So if you were to find someone that charges a fixed price ... That means they should be confident in what they are doing? Right?

Next time you need an Emergency Electrician, here's what to look for:

- Fixed Price for all callouts/fault finding.
- An answer during working hours by phone. Always! Most likely when you have a local landline rather than mobile (If you have our mobile we are usually too busy!). But the landline is always handled (in our case!) by a team.
- If outside of working hours, check to see if there is a 24/7 live chat on the website. A good one will have staff employed to answer this around the clock. A bad one will always be offline!
- Some of the high tech companies (such as ourselves) have an Online Quoting and Booking service. This means that you can see the price before you book. THEN you can book in the callout at a time suitable. If your time is not available, then at least you will know before you even spend the time making a call or having an online chat.

Sounds great. Where can I find such a thing?

If you are in Leeds you can use our Booking System. But if you live elsewhere, then use the advice above to find someone that offers a similar service to this below.

Just make sure that you find out those local to you offering this service in advance! That way when it comes to an emergency, you know straight away where to go.

Just go to our Online Booking System and you can do this yourself. REALLY quickly too!

When over there, choose the 3. Fix a Fault Fast ... category.
